

The Prince Edward Island Heritage Foundation

The Prince Edward Island Heritage Foundation, publisher of The Island Magazine, was established in 1970 to preserve and interpret the Island's past. It is governed by a Board of Directors representative of all areas of the Island.

Heritage Foundation staff members are actively involved in acquisitions, research, publications, and educational programs. They are also developing genealogical and other historical information services.

The Foundation displays and interprets its collections at heritage sites at Green Park, Basin Head, Orwell Corner, Elmira Station, and Eptek Centre. In addition, a series of exhibitions is offered at Beaconsfield, the headquarters of the Foundation. Beaconsfield is a classic Victorian-style house built in 1877 overlooking Charlottetown Harbour and historic Government House.
